NACVA OFFERS BUSINESS VALUATION AND BUSINESS INTERRUPTION WORKSHOPS IN SAN FRANCISCO

Advanced Valuation and Case Study Workshop and/or Natural Disasters and Other Business Interruptions Workshop

SALT LAKE CITY - May 18, 2006 - The National Association of Certified Valuation Analysts (NACVA) Consultants' Training Institute (CTI) announced that it will offer two three-day workshops: Advanced Valuation and Case Study Workshop and Natural Disaster and Other Business Interruptions Workshop. Both to be held at the Hyatt Regency, Fisherman's Wharf, Monday through Wednesday, June 5-7, 2006. To register or to obtain additional information, please call (800) 677-2009 for assistance.

The Advanced Valuation and Case Study Workshop is designed to take participants to a higher level of understanding in the valuation process and fill in the gaps of knowledge not fully addressed at the CTI's Business Valuation Training Center (TC): day one will analyze a company from top to bottom using various methods and applications. Also discussed are alternative/advanced applications such as risk analysis; day two will focus on advanced cost of capital techniques, including weighted average cost of capital and when to use it, capital asset pricing model versus build-up, methods of quantifying specific company/unsystematic risk and more; and day three will focus on the guideline company transaction method, including a detailed review and analysis of existing transactional databases.

The Natural Disasters and Other Business Interruptions Workshop was created to provide professionals with the ability to prepare a business interruption claim for a client, which requires a general understanding of insurance policies, forensic accounting principles, and the methodology appropriate for calculating certain claims: day one includes a detailed analysis and discussion of key points of the Business Interruption Policy, including definitions and interpretations. Also covered will be how to gather and/or reconstruct financial information required for disaster damage insurance claims; day two will be dedicated to the fundamentals of calculating business interruption claims. Covered will be the specific approaches used to measure business income losses and how and when they are used; and day three analyzes several "real life" business interruption claims, focusing on reconciliation of top-down and bottom-up calculations, the role of depreciation, and cash versus accrual statements, among others. Also addressed will be the unique problems that accompany the resumption of business activities after a disaster.
